Lyrarakis Winery (Alagni, Heraklion)

Dedicated to the rescue and revival of autochthonous grape treasures that were cultivated for hundreds of years on the island of Crete, the Lyrarakis family brought almost extinct Cretan varieties such as Plyto and Dafni to the forefront of Greek wine. The family works with a great number of indigenous varieties as well as international ones, aiming to the production of high quality wines. A pioneer of the Cretan wine revolution Lyrarakis is nowadays among the top Greek wineries, a well deserved recognition considering the consistency of its portfolio over the years.

Iliana Malihin (Melampes, Rethymno)

The young oenologist Iliana Malihin opens her wings with a brand-new project and the support of Spyros Chryssos from Santorini Island. Chasing old, sometimes abandoned vineyards in the area of Rethymno in Crete, she dedicates her efforts towards the revival of the long winemaking tradition of the district. The first results bring Vidiano grape variety under the microscope. Two different labels, one made from very old, ungrafted vines in the village of Melampes at an altitude of 800m and the second one from the same village and younger vines in a slightly lower altitude. The wines are made with minimal intervention in the cellar. The project will further develop in the short future with more wines from local varieties grown in other mountainous villages of Rethymno.

Endochora Wines (Vamos, Chania)

Endochora winery is one of the newest additions in the Cretan vineyard. It was established back in 2010 in the region of Chania. The boutique winery crafts a variety of wines mostly from the indigenous Vidiano and Kotsifali grapes as well as Syrah which is perfectly adapted in the region's vineyard. The winery is extremely sensitive in terms of organic viticulture, although is not yet certified, and tries to keep a hands-off approach in the winery, using indigenous yeasts and minimizing the use of sulphur in the wines. Endochora's mouthwatering Vidiano is sourced from old vines grown in the area of Chania. Actually it was grafted on top of old Romeiko roots that were unaffected from phylloxera.

Aori

A centenarian, ungrafted vineyard of Muscat of Spina, planted at an altitude of 810m in granitic-slate soils triggered Aimilios Andrei mind to make his first wine that finely expresses a unique sense of origin. His new project is named Aori, a local word for mountain, and comes from Crete's magnificent, yet undiscovered, mountainous part where there is a "treasure chest" of local grape varieties. This is a Muscat of Spina bursting with energy and depth, with unparalleled finesse and minerality (like liquid-rock) that places it in a different league from what you have ever tasted from this grape variety so far.

Santorini

Akra Chryssos

Spyros Chryssos is a young vigneron in the volcanic island of Santorini. He manages 20ha of old and much praised vines, a great heritage he received from his family in the villages of Pyrgos and Megalochori. He spends most of his time in the vineyard taking care of the characteristic basket-trained vines of Santorini and he follows an organic protocol in vine-growing. Back in the cellar he produces terroir-driven wines with minimal intervention and absolutely natural methods. Nothing is added or taken resulting in wines with crystal-clear, pure character that are among the best expressions of this unique terroir.

Tinos

Domaine de Kalathas

In 2011, Jerome Charles Binda, a former graphic designer and antique dealer, decided to start a new life from ground zero as a vigneron and winemaker in the island of Tinos. Jerome was enchanted by the ampelographic heritage of the island, which became it's second home, and he devoted himself in the revival and propagation of Tinos local ampelographic treasures. Indigenous ungrafted varieties were treated in ancient ampelographic practices and he managed to created an amazing portfolio of natural wines with zero addition of sulphites and hands-off approach in winemaking.

Cephalonia

Sclavos

Evriviadis Sclavos is unquestionably one of Greece's greater and most authentic producers. Through his wines he expresses the superiority and uniqueness of Cephalonian terroir, by applying organic cultivation and biodynamic principles, working only with local grape varieties such as Robola, Mavrodaphne, Vostilidi, Zakynthino and a few others. The wines are a true revelation for the uninitiated, unique, with great purity, vibrant, complex, evolving and overall exciting. A small sip of his wines is enough to prove that Cephalonia is one of Greece's most dynamic wine regions.

Kontogiannis Family (Korinthos)

Kontogiannis family has been growers since 5 generations. The small and up-coming winery concentrates all its efforts in producing wines made from privately owned vineyards grown under biodynamic and organic principles. The mean age of the vineyards is between 35-50 years and since 1999 all of them are certified organic while from 2006 biodynamic. A hands-down philosophy is applied in the winery, where there are only spontaneous fermentations, minimal or total absence of SO2 and no filtration. Old gnarled vines, low yields, application of biodynamics and minimal intervention in the winery, combined with the passion of the family results in terroir-driven wines with great substance able to display their lovely, pure character.

Sant'Or (Santameri, Achaia)

It's not so often that you meet people as dedicated and passionate with their vineyard and with great respect in nature as Panagiotis Dimitropoulos from Sant' Or winery. Panagiotis is a small vigneron crafting around 20.000 bottles each year. He took over the family estate in 2007 and since then he works in harmony with his vines and the nature. He grows his vineyard according to the principles of biodynamics and he also has a hands-off approach in winemaking. He takes care of some really old Mavrodaphne vines, dry-farmed Roditis and the rare local Santameriana grape along with vines from Agiorgitiko planted in the plateau of Asprokabos in Nemea. This is the first ever Greek winery that from 2019 vintage is certified as biodynamic from Demeter Organization.

Naoussa

Markovitis (ex Ch. Pegasus)

Markos Markovitis belongs to the new generation of vigneron in Naoussa region and he is among the pioneers who changed the perception on the Xinomavro grape and the style of wines that this variety is capable to produce. As soon as he completed his studies in oenology and viticulture in Germany, he came back and took over the small, family-owned winery in the area Polla Nera, in the northern part of the region. His Naoussa red wine is powerful and complex, yet always manages to retain the fine and elegant side of Xinomavro grape. From time to time, the winery releases older vintages, an "ode" to the unparalleled ageing potential of Xinomavro grape.

Ktima Tatsis (Goumenissa)

Periklis and Stergios Tatsis work their land from day one in a totally different way. They constantly experiment both in the winery and the vineyard. Taking over their family's winery, they decided to work their beautiful vines in Goumenissa region organically and they were certified organic in 1998. They belong to a small group of Greek winemakers who pioneered the natural wine movement in the 1990s. In 2002 they implemented biodynamic cultivation for their 14ha private hectares of vines, made up of varieties such as Roditis, Xinomavro, Negoska, Malagousia, Chardonnay and a few other international grape varieties. They don't use any additives in their wines, such as SO2 and of course they work only with indigenous yeasts, since they have moved to their new winery back in 2007. The term "natural wine" is a much abused one and very often a subject of speculation, so they don't prefer to label themselves as natural winemakers. What they would like to be seen is as producers crafting wines by heart, bearing their own truth and beliefs.

Cyprus

Vouni Panayia

Vouni Panagia is among the Cypriot wineries that experiment with the potential of Cyprus's indigenous grape varieties. Among Cypriot classics such as Xynisteri someone will be delighted by their micro-vinifications on rare, unheard grapes, such as Promara, Spourtiko, Morokanella, Giannoudi and others. Both in the vineyard and the winery they take a light approach excluding new oak, using native yeasts and spontaneous fermentations that highlight our understanding on the great potential of these unsung gems.

Champagne

Benoît Lahaye - Bouzy

Ask what is the most exciting aspect of Champagne region at the moment and you will take a single answer: the vigneron... Benoit Lahaye is a brilliant small grower in champagne located in the grand cru village of Bouzy with his vineyards dominated by a high percentage of Pinot Noir grape, covering almost 90%. He crafts magnificent champagnes in tiny quantities following the footsteps of a family steeped in winemaking tradition in Champagne region. He works following the principles of biodynamic viticulture, plows his vineyard with his horse, he does everything by hand and as a result he crafts beautiful champagnes made in a totally "natural" way. Back in the winery he doesn't use any commercial yeasts and all of his champagnes are elevated in oak barrels. SO2 addition is minimal and he experiments with zero addition in some of his cuvees such as Violaine. His wines are the true essence of Champagne and its magnificent terroir, highlighting the values of working hard in the vineyard and the winery.

Alexandre Filaine

The tiny Recoltant-Manipulant (RM) champagne producer Alexandre Filaine defines the concept of rarity in wine. While still working at the great Bollinger Champagne, Fabrice Gass set up his own range of champagnes made in tiny quantities. He works with 100 year-old barrels in the cellar as well as practicing remuage and disgorgement by hand. This is just a fraction of the "museum" techniques and tools he uses in the cellar. It feels like time has stopped in a previous century. However, his champagnes are brilliant, expressive and focused, characterized by a lovely creaminess on the palate yet vibrant fresh and sharp at the same time. A solid proof of his genius.

Larmandier-Bernier - Côte des Blancs

Larmandier-Bernier champagnes "capture" the magical terroir of Cote de Blancs, a god-blessed slope in the heart of Champagne region, where Chardonnay excels for centuries. Pierre and Sophie Larmandier are pioneers in the fields of biodynamic cultivation and produce great champagnes from grand cru vineyards with spontaneous fermentations, maturation in oak barrels or foudres and with low levels of dosage to retain purity. Rich, expressive yet mineral and pure, these amazing champagnes definitely feel more Burgundian in style.

Bourgogne

Domaine Pattes Loup - Chablis AC

Thomas Pico, the young owner of Domaine Pattes Loup is one of the rising super-stars in Chablis region. A passionate, unconventional winemaker who doesn't correspond in any of the clichés associated with the famous northernmost region of Burgundy. He is both on the throwback and the forefront of Chablis, looking back in his family's winemaking traditions, taking care of his grandfather's old vines and working according to the principles of biodynamics from the very beginning of his solo winemaking career. In less than a decade he managed to turn the spotlights in his work delivering terroir-driven Chablis with a great sense of place. The wines bear a unique energy, vibrancy and class as a result of his tireless work in the vineyard and hands-off approach in the winery.

Domaine Chandon de Briailles - Côte d'Or

Unmistakably charming, ethereal, with great precision, the white and red wines of Chandon de Briailles are a true representation of the magnificent Burgundian terroir. The fruit is harvested from privately owned vineyards in places such as the emblematic hill of Corton and the grand cru appellations of Corton, Les Marechaudes and Les Bressandes, as well as the village appellations of Aloxe Corton, Pernand Vergeleses and Savigny-les-Beaune. All of the vineyards are farmed biodynamically. There is a natural, non-interventional, approach in the winery and a total absence of new oak barrels throughout the winemaking process in order to maintain the bright fruit and highlight the brilliant terroir of the wines. The splendid, classic style of Chandon de Briailles wines is the apotheosis of the world's most prominent terroir.

Domaine de Villaine - Côte Chalonnaise

Just the name Aubert de Villaine, the famous proprietor of the world's top estate Domaine de la Romanee-Conti could justify the world's thirst for the wines of Domaine de Villaine. The essence, however, is that in the tiny, almost unknown village Bouzeron on the north part of Cote Chalonnaise in Burgundy, Pierre de Benoist, the nephew of Aubert de Villaine crafts outstanding wines that deserve the hype. The forgotten Aligote grape, a specialty of Bouzeron, is an explosive combination of zesty freshness and creamy texture, which along with the masterful single vineyard Chardonnays and Pinot Noirs from the estate's vineyards, highlight the great potential of a terroir that is expressed without any intervention. in the most natural way.

Domaine Guillemot-Michel - Viré-Clessé AC

The small appellation of Vire-Clesse AC, at the northern tip of the Macon region in Burgundy, is home to Guillemot's family excellent Chardonnays and Marc and Fine de Bourgogne. The Guillemots own just 6.5ha of beautiful vineyards in the village of Quintaine and they practice organic and biodynamic farming since 1991. Their Chardonnay is a brilliant example of Burgundy's concentration and finesse. Rich and exotic in style, yet not heavy, with a mouthwatering vibrant acidity. This is a benchmark for the region. Sophie (the daughter), upon her arrival in 2012, brought her new ideas and love for spirits. They produces among the most refined "eau de vie" spirits (Marc and Fine) in Burgundy and an uplifting London Dry Gin από Chardonnay.

Jérôme Galeyrand - Côte de Nuits

Jerome is one of the greatest secrets of Burgundy's vineyards. He began in 2002 with the purchase of an old tiny vineyard in the humbler Cote de Nuits Village appellation and he grew to 5 ha with holdings in different parts of the Cote. His total production is less than 20000-25000 bottles annually. The vineyards are certified organic and he works towards the biodynamic certification. With the exception of Aligote all the wines are sourced from privately owned land. Vinification takes place in a small "garage" and he experiments with whole bunch fermentation in Pinot Noir and overall works with a hands-off approach in the winery. The result is refined, elegant, ethereal wines with laser-like precision and stunning expressive aromas, highlighting the uniqueness of terroir and the forgotten - high quality- clones found in his old vineyards.

Sylvain Pataille - Côte de Nuits

A rising star of Burgundy's wine scene, Sylvain Pataille based on Marsannay, his ancestors land, produces some of the greatest Burgundies in terms of quality and price. He works by hand his 15ha of vines all based in Marsannay, the northernmost village of Cote de Nuits, in the outskirts of Dijon, and his wines are a luminous example of energy, texture, harmony and freshness. His Rose is out of this world, while his Chardonnays are pure and energetic and his Pinots a reflection of delicacy and complexity. Overall things get even more exciting when the conversation is centered among his four single vineyard Aligotes. He is the master of Aligote and these wines are sourced from old vineyards planted with the prephylloxera superior clone of Aligote Dore. Once upon a time these grapes used to dominate the best vineyards of Burgundy.

Hubert Lamy - Côte de Beaune

Olivier is at the pinnacle of Burgundy's new winemaking talent and runs his family winery Domaine Humbert Lamy, based in the hamlet of Saint-Aubin. Most of his vineyards are grown in Saint-Aubin but he also has holdings in the renowned villages of Chassagne-Montrachet and Puligny-Montrachet. Lamy is a game-changer in Burgundy following pioneering practices both in the vineyard and the winery. It is not much to say that Olivier put Saint-Aubin under the spotlight. He consistently experiments with alternative techniques in the vineyard such as high-density plantings or different pruning systems. There is no doubt that since his involvement in the winery he has raised the reputation of his wines and established himself as one of the leading producers of the young generation.

Pierre Morey & Morey-Blanc - Côte de Beaune

Pierre Morey is among the greatest figures in Meursault and Burgundy. He worked as a Régisseur (cellar director) for Domaine Leflaive from 1988 to 2008, while managing and growing the family business, Domaine Pierre Morey, in the heart of Meursault. Following his pioneering work with biodynamics in Domaine Leflaive, the Domaine Pierre Morey turned also biodynamic in 1997. Pierre Morey has access to some of the greatest vineyards of Meursault as well as small plots of land in the neighboring Puligny Montrachet, Monthelie and Pommard villages. The philosophy of minimal intervention in the vineyard and winery results in wines of crystal-clear purity, precision, that are able to transfer the message of terroir in the bottle.

Beaujolais

Domaine Marcel Lapierre - Morgon AC

It would be impossible to refer to the evolution taking place in Beaujolais without beginning the conversation with Domaine Lapierre. Marcel Lapierre was a pioneer member of a "gang" of winemakers that back in the 80s decided to reconsider their farming practices in the vineyard and their approach in winemaking, moving to organics, biodynamics and excluding the use of SO2 in their wines. Healthy, ripe fruit and controlled winemaking with native yeasts could make far better Beaujolais and this new approach resulted in seismic changes among the region and put "real" Beaujolais in the forefront. Yes, it tastes as good and sexy as your favorite Pinot Noir and it's much cheaper.

Château Cambon

This small Beaujolais estate came under the ownership of the legendary producers Marcel Lapierre and Jean-Claude Chadunet in the 1990s. Although it is not organic certified, there isn't any chemical treatment in the vineyard, nor in the winery with just adding a tiny amount of sulphites prior to bottling. Semi-maceration carbonique and spontaneous fermentation result in a wine bursting with depth of fruit and great freshness. This is not your average industrialized Nouveau style but a pure, authentic hand-crafted expression of what Nouveau can be in the right hands.

Domaine Antoine Sunier

Antoine is a young vigneron based in Regnie, Beaujolais. He has been in the winemaking since 2014 and works exclusively with old vines (an average age of 58 years) that he bought from old farmers of the region. His vineyards are based in the crus of Morgon and Regnie. Farming is organic and he is strongly influenced by Jean-Claude Lapalu a guru in natural winemaking. His 3 cru wines are majestic, elegant, ethereal and complex with layers of fruit. He is one of the young "guns" of Beaujolais and his wines are the ultimate expression of what good and modern Beaujolais is all about.

Bordeaux

Château Belles Graves - Lalande de Pomerol AC

A few hundred yards from the exquisite property of Chateau Petrus and in a fraction of its price, Chateau Belles-Graves is the answer to those who believe that premium Bordeaux should always be an overly-expensive, over-rated nonsense. From its idyllic, beautiful, Merlot-dominated vineyards with a splash of the ethereal Cabernet Franc, the wines of Chateau Belles Graves always display great finesse and subtlety matched with structure and overall complexity.

Rhône

Le Sang des Cailloux - Vacqueyras AC

Over the last two decades Serge Ferigoule has raised the profile of his property and Vacqueyras as any other producer in the area. Working with old vines in the characteristic red-clay and limestone soils with the famous galets (stones) and practicing biodynamic farming, he is capable of producing wines with amazing levels of intensity and concentration. However, his wines are not lacking freshness and they bear always top energy levels. The provocative name means the blood of the pebbles and his classic Cuvée Traditionnelle of Le Sang des Cailloux is named each year after one of his three daughters.

Vallée de la Loire

Denis Jamain - Reuilly AC

Tasting the wines of Denis Jamain is enough to make you reject the formely applied status to Reuilly appellation in Loire as "the poor man's Sancerre". Denis continues a long family tradition dating back to 1935 when his grandfather planted the first vines in the appellation. Denis studied oenology in America and took over the family winery in 1990. Today he farms 18 hectares of vines, with 3 of them reserved for Pinot Gris which give the rare and really distinctive Reuilly Rose. Although he uses stainless steel tanks to vinify many of his bottlings, Denis is very proud to select oak from his grandfather's forest to make his own barrels. Undoubtedly it is the terroir "speaking" in his wines!

Sebastien Riffault - Sancerre AC

Sebastien Riffault is what someone could call a "one man's show". He cultivates his vineyards without any assistance except that of his horse, following traditional techniques and the biodynamic principles. Most of his vines are very old, planted during the second world war by his grandfather and from these vines he crafts some of the most exciting, yet primitive wines in the region. He is an advocate of natural winemaking and his wines are surprisingly different from what someone expects from the region. He harvests the grapes when they are over-ripe and a proportion of them affected by botrytis. In the winery, literally he doesn't do anything. The elevation period for his wines is usually three years before bottling them, naturally without any additive. Probably these are among the craziest wines you are going to taste, but certainly totally authentic and unique.

Vincent Gaudry - Sancerre AC

Vincent Gaudry is a rising star of Sancerre located in the tiny hamlet of Sury-En-Vaux and he manages 11ha of vines across the appellation with 90% Sauvignon Blanc and 10% Pinot Noir. His rather austere yet expressive figure and his gentle personality can also be found in his wines. His complex Sauvignon Blancs are bursting with energy, minerality and freshness, a benchmark of Sancerre's style. The palate delivers amazing levels of freshness, striking acidity and precision with impressive length and complexity. If you ask him you will never get a definite answer on the making of his wines. He just claims that he tries to understand their needs and be patient for as long as it takes. He follows the lunar calendar and biodynamic viticulture and he never interferes in the winery. He is just observing and waiting the wines to tell when they are ready for release... No specific recipes here, just brilliant wines from a passionate and dedicated winemaker.

Domaine aux Moines - Savannières AC

The winery's name is translated as the "estate of the monks" and this is a direct reference to the long history of the estate that belonged to monks since the 12th century. The appellation "Savannières-Roche Aux Moines" AOC is lesser known than the Savannières AOC. The latter is a premium source of mostly dry Chenin Blanc in the Loire valley. However, "Savannières-Roche Aux Moines" is considered as one of the two grand cru sites of Savannières. In this magnificent terroir, Tessa Laroche crafts powerful wines of deep concentration, minerality and great aging potential. A combination of organic farming, biodynamic practices and natural vinification along with Tessa's talent results in crystal-clear and long-lived expressions of this amazing grape variety.

Domaine Champalou - Vouvray AC

Catherine and Didier Champalou excel in the region of Vouvray following the roots of their families – both come from vigneron- although they decided to establish their own domaine back in 1983. Nowadays Domaine Champalou is one of the most recognizable names in the appellation, highly acclaimed for producing unique, distinctive wines from the noble Chenin Blanc grape of Loire Valley. This is the only variety cultivated in the domaine capable of producing a great array of still and sparkling wines in different levels of sweetness ranging from bone dry to lusciously sweet.

Jo Landron - Muscadet Sèvre et Maine AC

Jo Landron is not just a brilliant Loire producer but also a man of great personality and genuine character. His characteristic mustache is as famous as his wines and certainly he stands apart from his colleagues, stirring things up in Muscadet region and building a strong reputation for this neglected appellation during the recent years. In a sea of bland, uninspired wines, his "natural" approach sounds as "music" in the ears of terroiristas and those seeking for purity and expression in their wines. He is dedicated in biodynamic farming and he credits the diversity of Muscadet's available terroirs through his amazing single-vineyard bottlings. His Muscadets are fresh with great tension and bear the characteristic salty minerality a benchmark for the region. The wines see different periods of lees-ageing depending on every single cuvee.

Alsace

Kuentz-Bas

Kuentz Bas winery is located in the town Husseren-les-Chateaux one of the highest points in Alsace region. Under the guidance of Jean-Batiste Adam, a fourteenth generation vigneron and great advocate of Alsatian terroir and Samuel Tottoli, former sommelier and winemaker in the estate, Kuentz Bas has gained back its glorious status . Sharing a common philosophy that embraces hard work in the vineyards and minimum human intervention in the cellar Kuentz Bas produces world-class Riesling, Gewurztraminer and Pinot Gris, a crystal-clear expression of this magical terroir.

Jura

Domaine André et Mireille Tissot

Jura is one of the best kept secrets in the world of wine. Such a small wine region centered between Bourgogne and Switzerland yet producing a great variety of styles with unfamiliar, exotic names such as Arbois, Savagnin, Vin Jaune or Vin de Paille. For those fortunate enough that have already exposed themselves to the great wines of Jura the name Stephane Tissot doesn't need any kind of introduction. One of the best interpreters of Jura's terroir, he is certified biodynamic since 2004 and produces an impressive array of wines -from the sherry-like vin jaune to the super-sweet vin de paille or from the particularly distinctive light Trousseau reds to the nutty dry white Savagnin the local distinctive grape of the region. The wines are truly unique, food-friendly paying respect to Jura's isolated terroir. More than that Tissot's Chardonnays are remarkable with great depth, while his Vin Jaune is the French answer to Spain's dry Fino Sherry.

Roussillon

Domaine Gauby - IGP Côtes-catalanes

In less than 30 years Gerard Gauby is likely to be considered as a true legend for Roussillon bringing this isolated and somehow neglected winemaking-region under the microscope of the modern winelover. Hard-working with ancient vines, practicing biodynamic viticulture and taking advantage of this unique, world-class, terroir he crafts impeccable wines with dense structure and complexity reflecting their place of origin. His grand cru Muntada is a wine full of depth and intensity while his Les Calcinaires range is about charm and youthfulness. This is the kind of wines that will speak straight to your heart.

G.D. Vajra - Barolo

Following traditional paths in winemaking, Aldo Vajra has earned the title of "the most modern of the traditionalists and the most traditional of the modernists in the region". The wines bear great finesse and delicate aromas, sometimes they are more difficult to understand but they can certainly stand out in the table. The old family vineyards were unexploited until the late sixties, when Aldo returned from Turin back to Barolo and established the winery. The family owns land in some of the most prestigious crus of Barolo such as Bricco delle Viole, Fosati, La Volta and Coste di Vergne.

Luigi Baudana - Barolo

A great traditionalist, a leading figure in the Barolo region, Luigi Baudana holds just 4ha of land in Serralunga d' Alba primarily in the crus of Baudana and the highly regarded Cerretta vineyard in the heart of Barolo. The annual production of this garage winery is less than 10000 bottles annually. Baudana, the family name, the historical cru and the hamlet, is a sign of just how deep the family's roots are tied to this precious wine-land. In 2008 the Vajra family acquired the estate in order to ensure its viability and future presence. Aldo Vajra considers himself as the guardian of Baudana name and after consolidation the quality standards were respected while the historic estate hasn't lost its appealing authenticity and traditional character.

Proprietà Sperino - Lessona

Proprietà Sperino is not just another project for the De Marchi family, owners of the famous Isole e Olena estate in Tuscany but the restoration of the century-old tradition of winemaking in the region of Lessona in northern Piedmont. The wines are fine, elegant, and distinctive, a different version of the king Nebbiolo grape, sometimes blended with other local varieties such as Vespolina and Croatina. This is one of the rising terroirs of Alto Piemonte that deserves your full attention and definitely a great alternative to the pricey Barolo wines.

Beppe Marino Azienda Agricola - Asti

Beppe Marino runs this family estate with his wife Rosalba and his son Maurizio in the heart of Santo Stefano Belbo. Passionate about the quality of their grapes, they produce lovely wines only from their privately-owned hilly vineyards. Recently they have moved their production to an old monastery where nuns used to make Moscato wine for more than a century.

Monte Dall' Ora

Alessandra and Carlo work laboriously only by hand and by heart their beautiful estate in the heart of the historic Valpolicella classico appellation on the amphitheatrical slope of Castelrotto hill. The stone-built, ancient terraces, the impressive pergola system of training the local varieties, the lovely cherry trees and the old olive groves create a unique ecosystem, a true heaven on earth. The biodynamic cultivation in the vineyard is followed by a hands-off approach in the winery, resulting in lively wines that burst of aromas and freshness. Their Amarone is a wonderful example of combined power and elegance and even their entry level Valpolicella a light, bright, fruity, joyful wine can be as friendly as your brother's house. Definitely you will find Alessandra's and Carlo's beautiful souls in their wines...

Isole e Olena - Chianti

Isole e Olena is one of those estates that have led the way to the renaissance of Chianti Classico and gained multi-awards from established international guides such as Gambero Rosso. Much credit goes to the owner Paolo de Marchi and his firm ideas about Sangiovese and international varieties such as Syrah, Cabernet Sauvignon and Chardonnay, thus leaving his fingerprint in this leading Italian wine-region.

Sicily

Tenute delle Terre Nere - Etna

From the volcanic terroir of Etna region in Sicily, Marco de Grazia and his team craft organic wines that express as purely as possible this ancient terroir with great respect and care to the nature. In the northern slopes of Mount Etna, this island within an island that is Etna, Marco produces exquisite wines using autochthonous grape varieties. The vineyards extend from the village of Solicchiata to the town of Randazzo, an area historically recognized as the greatest source for Nerello Mascalese grapes and fine red wines.

Marche

Aurora

Pioneering organic and biodynamic viticulture in the region of Marche, Aurora is co-founder of The Association of Organic Marche Farmers. Aurora was established in the 70s, aiming towards the production of wines made from local varieties with a great respect to Mother Nature. The local Pecorino grape is a total revelation for the uninitiated while the red Montepulciano grape either as varietal or in blends produces structured wines with a Mediterranean soul.

Spain

Envinate Wines

Envinate is the ultimate symbol of Spanish wine's new era, a unique project among friends who they have started to search for abandoned vineyards in areas like Tenerife, Ribeira Sacra or Almansa. The more difficult the cultivation the better for the Envinate project since these guys are looking for very ancient, ungrafted vines from indigenous varieties in often very steep slopes. They strictly work with traditional methods both in the vineyard and the winery. The wines are natural, made in tiny quantities mostly from single vineyards and there is a deep respect for the vine-growers that tend these painstaking vines. Envinate is the most exotic word among the sommeliers around the world who are trying hard to get their hand in the limited quantities of these hand-crafted old-school wines. Wines that manage to bring back into the light almost forgotten traditions.

Tenerife

Suertes del Marqués

Started out as growers, the Lima family jumped to the wine production in 2006. They are based on the steep slopes of Orotava Valley and they aim to preserve the long-standing traditional viticultural methods and varieties of their region. They introduced organic and low-interventionist approaches in the winery, using only autochthonous yeasts and reducing sulphur to minimal levels. They pioneered the renaissance of Tenerife bringing back a winemaking tradition of 5 centuries. The wines are outstanding, bursting with energy, and reductive smoky character, a mineral signature of Tenerife's outstanding volcanic terroir. They are the object of desire for the top-wine lists around the globe.
